About Frogworld

Frogworld is an immersive, first-person VR adventure designed for players who are curious about what life is like for some of our more diminutive animal cousins.

Put yourself in the body of a little bullfrog. Hunt for flies. Jump, crawl, and swim away from environmental dangers and natural predators as you search for a new, healthy ecosystem to call home. It's a big day for a little frog.

Available now as an Early Release on Oculus and Steam, Frogworld features three levels, each with unique environments, predators, and obstacles.

About NatureSims

NatureSims is an indie studio dedicated to combining biological and ecological research with cutting-edge technology in order to build first-person VR experiences that allow people to defy the limitations of their own bodies and experience the world as if they were another living creature. Learn about our animal cousins by seeing the world through their eyes in a format that is half videogame, half simulation.

Frogworld marks the beginning of the NatureSims series. The next volume, currently under development, incorporates research from an international group of scientists to take users even deeper into the perceptual world and lived experience of one of our most beloved winged creatures, the Monarch Butterfly.
